Whatever actions we do that weekend, it will be about finding intimacy with the land. The Witney & Fairford Branch Through Time have seen a poor blackcap locked in a cage: shy, sad and sickly, cowering in a corner of her cage, she watched us with terrified eyes and on hearing the cheerful sound of the other small birds singing on the green of the meadow or in the blue of the sky, she followed it with an expression that one could be persuaded was full of tears. Every oil rich nation has the means to stop any hi-tech US or Israeli tank in their tracks and to down any drone, fighter jet or bomber. Gorgeous images of a richly strange world cover this ethical armature in a sweetly fleshy narrative, a joyful ferment of words.
